be overtaken by trouble.

Capital Has One Big Contest

The 1920 football campaign, which is about ready to be ushered in with great acclaim. offers Washington but one contest of any real merit. The Georgetown University eleven, which is expected to provide the class in District gridiron circles, meets Washington and Lee at American League park on November 20. Right there you've said all there is to be said of classy football for the Capital in 1920. Georgetown's real battles will be fought at Annapolis with the Middies, at New York with Fordham, at Atlanta with Georgia Tech, and at Boston with Boston College. Only such minor elevens as New York Aggies, St. John's of Annapolis and West Virginia Wesleyan will face the Hilltoppers here, with the single exception of the Generals from Lexington, Va.

However, though high cost of traveling will keep the fans at home, they will have much to read about South Atlantic teams. Virginia Military Institute will play Pennsylvania on Franklin Field, for instance, while both Maryland University and Washington and Lee are to tackle Princeton. Virginia will try her luck again against Harvard. North Carolina is on the Yale schedule, with North Carolina State booked for a contest with Penn State. Rutgers meets Maryland, Virginia and V. P. I.

Of course, there will be the usual big games, such as Yale vs. Princeton, Harvard vs. Yale, and Penn vs. Cornell, but there will be several newer contests certain to attract much attention from grididon followers. For Even the chap who exceeds instance, there will be the invasion of the Harvard stadium by Center College of Kentucky, that little squad which rose to such heights last fall. There will be the ecursion of Columbia to Ithaca and the battle against Penn in New York. Williams is back on the Haryard schedule. West Virginia goes to New Haven. The Navy team will battle the Tigers at Princetton. This is the for any contest but the annual service battle with West Point. Plans call for the Tigers to play at Annapolis 1921, with the Middles going to Coach Morrow and Backfield Coach Philadelphia for the contest with test for the Big Green eleven. Aside from meeting three South At lantic elevens and Nebraska, Rutgers will go to Detroit to tackle that wild gang which so murderously mauled the Georgetown team last fall. Rutgers comes close to having an intersectional schedule all by itself. NEW YORK IS LUCKY.

New York is one lucky town. Boasting no stronger cleven than Columbia, the metropolis will see Rutgers clash with Nebarska on Novemer 2, Cornell tackle Dartmouth on November 6, Pennsylvania battle Columbia on November 20, and the service contest between Annapolis and sensational guard of last year's Dart-West Point on November 27. The midshipmen, on the other hand, were fresh enough to have started over again. The English crew took the lead at the start and fought off the Americans until the mile mark was reached. By that time the strain was tellng on the Leanders and some were splashing. Then Stroke King called for action and, with 300 yards to go, the Americans began walking up on the Leanders. With 150 yards to go both shells were even. Then came the spurt and America had won.
